Social Media Check

For my social media check, I looked at all the major social media platforms that display my full name publicly; these include Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter. I decided to look at the post which gained the most exposure and used those to score for this checklist. According to the scoring sheet, my social media presence is overall positive. Most of my public social media accounts are used to stay in contact with people I am not in proximity with. Most of my online interactions are done through anonymous accounts or platforms which are encrypted. This help keeping my online presence free from things that employers can consider risky in terms of hiring. My best posts are the posts related to my family and coworkers that I always put a positive emphasis on. The posts that I can be problematic at best are the pictures of my friends and I at the shooting range or out hunting. However, I believe that responsible gun ownership shouldn't necessarily be a negative aspect so long as the material posted is done so in a responsible matter.
